

DE 3727417

The document describes merely in general a method for producing a mixture of mineral substances for dietetic or pharmaceutical purposes, in which biological-organic raw materials are reduced to their mineral content by incineration. As to the international search report of May 2005, the document has been cited as defining the general state of the art which is not considered to be of particular relevance.